

Web Press Corporation Announces Management Changes

March 27, 2007

Web Press Corporation, a Kent, Washington printing press manufacturer, has announced that Mark J. Ricca has been appointed as President and CEO of the company and its international sales subsidiary, Web Leader International, Inc.

Mr. Ricca has been heading WPC's sales and marketing division since October, 2003.

Prior to joining Web Press Corporation, Mr. Ricca was the President/CEO of two companies in the Northwest. Mr. Ricca has owned/operated five successful companies in the Northwest over the last twenty-three years, which have all maintained monetary profitability tempered with community involvement.

“Despite economic ups and downs in press purchases, and the economy as a whole, there is still great interest in smaller press lines and color add-ons,” states Ricca. “We are excited and proud to be not only part of the single-width press industry, but part of a rare breed of companies whose management and manufacturing are still in the United States of America. Our high quality machinery and four year Quad-Stack™ warranty are catching the attention of not only customers, but competitors as well. Keep your eye on Web Press Corporation for revolutionary innovations currently on the drawing board that will give us an edge for years to come.”

Additional changes include the appointment of Rick Guinn as Vice President of Operations.

Rick Guinn has over 30 years of WPC experience, including installation, assembly, and most recently, Technical Services Manager. Rick will continue working with customers' technical service needs, as well as overseeing the daily workings of the WPC manufacturing plant.
